Autism Speaks and Royal Arch Masons fund 3 researchers in auditory processing disorder

Autism Speaks, with the support of a Royal Arch Research Assistance grant, is funding two pilot studies and one Fellowship to understand central auditory processing disorder and sound-processing difficulties.

Royal Arch Masons International ranks among the leading charities helping children with central auditory processing disorder. The disorder can lead to difficulty using, understanding and remembering information conveyed through speech and other sounds.

“The Royal Arch Masons have generously supported advancements in our understanding of a major communication and learning challenge that affects many people with autism,” said Autism Speaks Vice President of Clinical Programs Donna Murray, Ph.D.

“This longstanding partnership helps to support the community by working toward solutions to auditory processing challenges that will improve lives.”

Each one-year pilot study will be funded at $60,000, and the fellowship awards $40,000 per year for two years.

Special Reception

The Special Reception was hosted by William G. Bray Commandery #65 on October 16. The Special Reception is held in honor of the sitting Grand Commander every year and is all in good fun. Commandery members join in roasting the Grand Commander.

The theme is usually based on the Grand Commander's career. GC Ed Fodrea works in the medical field. Commandery members were dressed in hospital gowns that were open in the back. Instead of swords, the Sir Knights crossed huge thermometers. MIGM Sean Jones and MEGC Ed Fodrea donned lab coats logoed with a cross and crown and "Bray Campus #65".

GC Ed Fodrea was gifted a watch that was surrounded by Sir Knights with the swords pointing towards the center. Lady Christine received a beautiful handmade fleece blanket that was warm and fuzzy in fall colors.

Thanksgiving Message from the Grand Prelate

Friends

Sir Knights,

Once again, Thanksgiving Day is fast approaching and I would ask that each of you take a moment out of your busy schedule, sit down and ask yourself “what are you most thankful for”? Some would say their health, others might say our freedom or maybe even others might say their careers. These are all great reasons to be thankful, however, we often take for granted some of the simpler things such as our family and friendships. Friendship is God’s gift to us. Without friends, life is a boring and lonely road to walk. When we lose a friend or family member we find out the true meaning of loss and pain.

As I reflect on Thanksgiving Day, I would have to say I am grateful that I am a Mason. I am grateful for my Masonic brothers who I have made lifelong lasting relationships with and who have always been there to support me. Had it not been for this great masonic fraternity our paths may have never crossed, these individuals that I am now proud to call my brother and my friend. Even if I had experienced a rough day at work I could always be assured that after attending a masonic function my spirits were lifted and by the end of the evening I seem to have forgotten about my rough day. Think of the many meetings, dinners, banquets and degree work that we have shared together with those brothers over the many years. Masonry to me is a lifelong journey, increasing in knowledge, the support of brotherly love and the search for further light. In our masonic journey we all took an oath regarding saving a brothers life. It is written in John Chapter 15: Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. What a powerful message.

When I first became a Mason in 1997 I was very impressed with the hats, clothing and collars of the distinguished officers. The 33 degree’s with their white hats. The Commandery in their class “A” uniforms, white gloves, swords and chapeau’s, and the purple worn by Grand Lodge officers. I wondered at that moment if someday I would ever be fortunate enough to be one of those distinguished brothers. At that time I was a young Master Mason and I watched with envy those older distinguished brothers, admiring the friendships and comradery they all shared hoping one day that It would be myself sharing in those same friendships they were experiencing. Over my 25 years in masonry I discovered that these men earned those titles and the opportunity to wear those hats with hard work and commitment. One doesn’t learn masonry in a day, a week or even a month. It takes a lifetime of dedication and the love of our gentle craft.

I am additionally grateful for our senior brothers who seem to be a wealth of masonic knowledge. We all know who I am talking about because each one of our masonic bodies have such an individual who we can always turn to for questions or advice at a moment’s notice. These brothers are always as eager to give their masonic knowledge as we are eager to receive it. Friends come in all shapes and sizes. Some old, some middle age and some young but we all have one thing in common, we are all brothers in Masonry.

Yes, the friendships I have made in my search for further light over the years I will always cherish and could never be replaced. Imagine if you will, if one of those close brothers to whom you have had the pleasure of sharing friendships with suddenly laid down his working tools of life and was now called to that Grand Asylum above. The final grain of sand has fallen from his hour glass and our heavenly Father’s outstretched hand welcomes him home. With our fallen brother we have walked the pilgrimage of life. Many of our Brothers have already experienced this difficult loss with close brothers, but we are comforted in the knowledge that they are now in the hands and care of our heavenly Father.

As we move forward, let us make the most of every day, lay aside our differences and enjoy those lifelong friendships while we still have time. Remember that with each passing day, we ourselves our advancing toward that day when our labors will have been completed. That day, when we shall lay down our sword and shield and pray that all that we have said and done in our journey through life has been pleasing to our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. That day, when we shall be called to the Celestial Lodge above and will be reunited with our brothers for eternity.

Happy Thanksgiving Brothers,
Dan Patterson GP

Knights Templar Eye Foundation

Dr. Sandip K. Basu from the University of Tennessee Health Sciences Center was awarded a $70,000 grant titled: A novel anti-ceramide gene therapy for retinitis pigmentosa.

Retinitis Pigmentosa (RP) is an inherited disease that starts in childhood with night blindness and peripheral vision loss. The disease progresses with age and the affected individual completely loses vision by 40-50 years of age. The vision loss happens due to progressive death of the light sensing cells of the retina, called photoreceptors, due to mutation in more than 100 different genes essential for proper vision. Gene therapy is a very promising strategy to cure hereditary diseases, but the high heterogeneity of mutations that cause RP makes it difficult to develop a common therapy that could help affected people with different underlying mutations. Since the ultimate effect of all the different mutations is death of the photoreceptors, targeting a common factor of photoreceptor death could be beneficial for a diverse group of RP patients with different mutations.
